Catherine,

Excuse me. (taking my own advice)

Lady Catherine,

would you care to share your views on how Fetichauctioneer.com is doing, where you think its going and, in particular, what makes for a successful auction on that site?

<<would you care to share your views on how Fetichauctioneer.com is doing>>

According to the business plan I outline in January 2002, we're doing well. At the moment, it's a buyer market to be sure. I'd like to see more buyers and sellers to be sure. But, we're on schedule and will only get larger. We've averaged 500 new members a month joining since July.

<<where you think its going >>

I hope it's going to become larger in general and eventually be another eBay without the anti-SM policies or restrictions or costs. At the moment we don't charge to list an item or a final value fee. We offer the site for free. We will continue that.

For the immediate future we're currently developing software that is faster, more user friendly and has more perks and options for sellers and buyers. We expect to have that out shortly.

<< in particular, what makes for a successful auction on that site?

That's a very difficult question. Our buyers have extremely varied interests. We haven't done demographics of the clients who use our site due to time constraints.

Thank you for asking and for your interest.

Catherine
